The Wisconsin Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center (ADRC) studies the causes, diagnosis, treatment, and prevention of Alzheimer’s disease, as well as related topics such as caregiver stress and patient care. The following is a summary of our accomplishments since the center was formally established in April 2009 through March 31, 2021.

Wisconsin ADRC By the Numbers

39 scientists

46 active research studies in basic science and clinical research

74% overall Clinical Core retention rate

1000 participants in Clinical Core

25% from underrepresented groups (URGs)

794 participants received Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) scans

546 participants received Lumbar Punctures (LPs)

522 participants received combined MRI and LP

235 participants received amyloid Positron Emission Tomography (PET) exams

66 community outreach and educational events in 2020

94 podcast episodes of Dementia Matters

180,210 episode downloads

83 research papers published last year

25% international listenership from 110 countries

Wisconsin Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN
SCHOOL OF MEDICINE AND PUBLIC HEALTH

NIH National Institute on Aging Designated Alzheimer’s Disease Research Center

Stay Connected!
600 Highland Avenue, MC 2420
Madison, Wisconsin 53792
(608) 265-0407 | www.adrc.wisc.edu

© 2021 Board of Regents of the University of Wisconsin System